Girls' Camps at Lake Vera to Open June 13

Mrs. Snyder, in charge of Camp Fire Girl activities, has been in Nevada City a few days arranging for the arrival of about 30 girls, the first group, from Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley on June 13th. She placed orders for groceries, ice cream, milk and other necessary supplies to be used during the summer and left for the bay district this afternoon.

Miss Rhea Rupert, who is in charge of the Piedmont Camp Fire Girls, is expected to arrive today or tomorrow to fix up the camp for the arrival of a group of Camp Fire Girls in the near future.

The Mills College camp, which was rented by the Camp Girls Reserve of the W. C. T. U., will open June 18 with 100 girls.

The Lake Vera section will present a busy, happy scene for several weeks as relays of girls come for their annual vacations.

YELLOW JACKETS, RED ANTS ATTACK MINER

Ted Shields, mining man, who is working a gravel claim two miles from North Columbia, had a harrowing experience last week while building a fence about his property. Busy cutting a trail through brush, he disturbed a nest of yellow jackets that fiercely attacked him. He rushed to the house doused his wounds with baking soda and returning, decided to detour the nest. In doing so he suddenly found himself in the midst of a red ants' tenement. They ran up his trouser legs biting fiercely at every pause in their ascent. Shields shucked out of his clothes and ran to his cabin and used up the rest of the can of soda. He came into town Saturday to replenish the soda supply.

DR. VORONOFF TO STUDY BAGDAD CENLENARIANS

LONDON, June 4.—Dr. Serge Voronoff, famous rejuvenation expert, has been studying why people who never heard of monkey's glands can live to be 100. He recently visited Bagdad and Teheran because he had heard that those cities had many centenarians. In particular, a community of old people living near Teheran, who have apparently discovered the secret of long life, aroused Dr. Vooronoff's interest. "People's ages are often exaggerated in the East," he said, "but I have received authentic information from unbiased French doctors in the region that many of these people show strong proof of being more than 130 years old. Only in Ireland have I heard of cases approaching this. People there, I believe, have lived to be 120."

TREATY OF UNION BURNED IN PUBLIC

EDINBURGH, June 4.—While a large crowd cheered and bagpipes played, Miss Wendy Wood set fire to a paraffin-soaked copy of the Treaty of Union between Scotland and England, in Parliament Square, Edinburgh, Scotland, recently. The meeting was that of the Democratic Scottish Self-Government Organization, and the destruction of the document was described as "Scotland's best bonfire." T. Garty, a miner, presided. The burning followed the placing on the door of the old Parliament House a notice stating that the treaty had been broken. Miss Wood made herself known last year by leading a party which hauled down the Union Jack from Stirling Castle and hoisted a Scottish flag before the eyes of a surprised sentry.

JEWELRY ROCK FOUND AT COPPEROPOLIS

COPPERAPOLIS, June 4.— In sinking a shaft on the Bonanza mine in the Keystone district, four miles east of Copperopolis, "jewelry" ore has been struck by W. D. Hicks, Los Angeles mining man.

Hicks recently leased the property from Reusser and Son, and lost no time in starting operations. Surface indications were promising and with depth the large ledge has grown richer and richer. It is the intention of the operator to place machinery on the property after a definite ore tonnage has been assured.

BUSINESS SHOWS UPWARD TREND; DESPITE STRIKES

Main problem of industry hasn't changed the last few weeks—and that problem is strikes. Activities in Toledo, where the national guard was called out, several men killed and many badly injured, have stunned the public. At this writing, Pacific Coast commerce is tied up solid with the longshoremen's and seamen's strikes. Outside of this, little that is especially noteworthy has happened to industry. A brief review follows:

STEEL—Production has increased, recently touching 59 per cent of capacity. Industry believes that summer seasonal trends will force a slackening soon.

MOTORS—Beginning in late April a decline in production began and it has continued. Late weekly reports show a drop of 11,000 units from preceding week. Three companies out of 13 showed slight gains.

CARLOADINGS—On May 4, loadings were almost 2,000,000 cars over same period last year. A slight decline is appearing, but the position of the rails remains comparatively good.

COMMODITY PRICES—Recently the wholesale commodity level touched the highest mark of the year. A steady, slow advance is noticeable.

COAL—Production, though tending downward, is much heavier than in previous two ears.

SECURITIES—The stock market has been generally quiet, with few changes from the level reached last March. Recently average prices have fallen, with utilities alone holding their ground. Average bond prices have likewise been lower.

RETAIL TRADE—A rather sharp drop has occurred in this field. Latest official data indicates that the decline is greater than seasonal experience would have indicated.

GENERAL BUSINESS INDEX—During most of this year, the rise has been greater than seasonal. Part of that improvement has been lost through late decline, but the index is still far ahead of last year.

The pall bearers were: O. P. Strangberg, A. J. Carey, A. Hartung, C. S. Arbogast, Clayton Chatfield and J. F. Stenger.

W. R. Jefford and Son were in charge of arrangements.

SEVERAL SCHOOLS HOLD GRADUATION EXERCISES

Diplomas were granted Saturday to the 8th grade pupils of Truckee, Chicago Park, North Bloomfield and Oakland or Gold Flat schools. The diplomas this year are gold covers of natural leather for the case and a gold colored leaflet with the regular diploma inside.

Each year County Superintendent Ella M. Austin tries to make the diplomas different the covers varying in colors, one being a beautiful blue, but the gold color is the most attractive so far, as they seem suitable to this section of California.

THREE STRIKES AT CARSON HILL MINE REPORTED

MELONES, June 4—Three recent strikes of rich ore, two within the past week, have helped the Carson Hill mine at Melones to attain its former position as one of the leading gold mining properties in California.

The two most recent strikes were the discovery of high grade ore in the Calaveras open pit and the uncovering of high grade on the north end of the Morgan Glory hole, 400 feet from the find of "jewelry" rock March 12.

Of the discovery at the Calaveras open pit, Lawrence Monte Verda, vice president of the Carson Hill Gold Mining Corporation, says: "The ore is showing galena and values are running high. Some samples reach $30 a ton." Ore previously taken from the Calaveras sit of steam shovel operations averaged from $4 to $5 a ton. Two hundred tons of the higher grade ore are being removed by steam shovel every day, Monte Verda said.

Some ore being taken out from the north end of the Morgan Glory hole is "equally as good as that encountered 400 feet away March 12," Mr. Monte Verda states.

The March 12 discovery yielded ore ranging from $80,000 to $150,000 a ton. Value-bearing quartz is still being removed from the scene of the first strike, some still running "very high" in value, according to the vice-president.

Since the mine was reopened October 1, 1933, total production has amounted to $350,000, Monte Verda announces. Ore treated during April totaled 19,800 tons.

Additions to the mill and cyanide plant, now under way, are expected to be completed by October 1, and, when finished, will mean a considerable increase in tonnage treated and employment.

New tanks have been ordered for the cyanide plant and are expected to be erected by June 1. New steel door classifiers also have been ordered.

New cables have been purchased and it is planned to open the bottom of the mine at 3000 feet, Monte Verda states. Ore is now coming from the 1600 and 1350 foot levels.

The corporation states it is increasing the capacity of the mill from 600 to 1000 tons daily, an investment approximating $250,000.

YOUNG HITCHHIKERS RETURNED TO PARENTS

Two young lads about fourteen or thereabouts landed in Nevada City Friday afternoon after a hitch-hike from the maddening crowds of San Francisco. They were greeted by probation officer A. W. McGagin and given the hospitality of the upper part of the court house.

The officers succeeded in getting in touch with the parents of the two boys, and one of them, Leo Ribkoff, was sent to his home in San Francisco yesterday. The other boy, Kimball Anderson, was today taken to Downieville, where his mother is staying temporarily. Both boys were on their way to Downieville when halted in Nevada City.

Muscardini, Mr. and Mrs. Larson Henwood and children, and Elisha Curtis, of Nevada City and Larry Seiker, of Grass Valley, enjoyed Sunday at Lake Spaulding. They caught several nice trout and a striped bass, the latter being a surprise as they had no idea bass were in the lake. They also saw another large bass in shallow water near the shore, which refused to bite.

TWENTY MEN EMPLOYED IN ZEIBRIGHT MINE

WRECKERS WILL CLEAR BANK SITE

Bids were closed today at 10 o'clock for the wrecking of the buildings on the site recently purchased in Nevada City by the Bank of America for their new building.

These bids were received by the Capital Company in San Francisco. Through the efforts of Mr. Rector, several local general contractors and sub contractors have sent in bids on this work and an answer is looked forward to with keen interest.

PHOENIX MINE SHAFT NOW DOWN 300 FEET

The Phoenix mine, west of the North Star propery, below Grass Valley, is now down 300 feet. Preparations are being made to sink again.

This is one of the newly opened properties of this year. With a large acreage acquired in recent months it promises well. Twenty-five men are employed under Superintendent T. S. Davey.

NEVADA CITY AIRPORT ATTRACTING TRAFFIC

While the Nevada City airport is not considered complete, pilots are able to land on one runway without difficulty, it was demonstrated Saturday with a plane landed there and took off easily. Not long since a big plane used in the airmail service between Seattle and Alaskan points landed at the field with Mr. and Mrs. James Donahue of Cordova, and their guest Miss Lucille Durbrow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Will Durbrow, of Town Talk, as passengers. The pilot was Harold Gielan.

Mrs. T. G. Akers and Mrs. B. Bernheim, former residents of Nevada City, spent several days in Nevada City last week as the guests of Miss Minnie Brand and Mrs. Belle Douglas. They were here for the Memorial Day exercises and left Friday for their home in the Bay section.

Mr. and Mrs. William Hatch spent the week end on a trip to Tonopah, where he attended to business.

THREE FOX PUPS ARE CAPTURED BY PICKELL

F. M. Pickell, of Pick's Retreat, two miles above Camptonville, has three fox pups that provide endless amusement for his guests. Pickell while fishing a short time ago noticed two foxes hovering around a pile of stones. Investigating he found the pair refused to leave the pile except to keep out of his reach. He began delving into the rock pile and presently discerned the den with the pups in it. The parents now approached and displayed a peevish temper. With one hand Pickell battled off the Reynard and wife and with the other captured the three pups. They are now fairly domesticated and their antics provide the chief center of interest in his camp.

Harless is survived by his mother, Mrs. Effie Fippin, of the Rough and Ready district. He was born in Colorado and would have been 21 years of age on June 17.

KEYSTONE CROSS CUTS TO PICK UP LEDGE

The Keystone mine, west of Grass Valley, has passed the 100 foot level in sinking operations and are now drifting to cut the ledge. The three compartment shaft was sunk perpendicularly and at the 60 foot depth they were out of the ledge. In cross cutting, they expect to pick up the ledge.

House Committee Votes to Impeach Judge Woodward—Troops Suppress Labor Riots in Two States—Chicago's Fair Reopened.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© by Western Newspaper Union.

FIFTEEN of twenty members of the house committee on judiciary voted for impeachment action against Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward of Chicago, and it was announced that formal charges against him would be drawn up and presented on the floor of the house within a few days. The house must then decide the matter of impeachment and if it finds the charges substantiated the jurist will be tried at the bar of the senate. According to reports in Washington, flagrant nepotism was to be the major charge against Judge Woodward, this being based on evidence showing he appointed the law firm of Loucks, Eckert & Peterson to many lucrative attorneyships in bankruptcy and equity receivership cases; that his son, Harold, was employed by this firm, and that Harold's compensation was raised from about $2,000 to $13,000 a year soon after Judge Woodward began making those appointments.

Judge C. E. Woodward

The vote in the committee was nonpartisan. Three members were absent. Eleven Democrats and four Republicans voted for impeachment. Of the five casting their ballots against impeachment four were Republicans, one was a Democrat.

It may be the Woodward case will set a precedent in impeachment trials. To avoid a summer session of the senate, Senator Ashurst of Arizona has offered a resolution providing that an impeachment case may be first heard by 12 senators instead of by the entire senate. These twelve would hear the testimony and present it in a certified report to the senate at the next session.

LABOR troubles became so serious that state troops were mobilized in Minneapolis and in Toledo, Ohio, and despite the presence of soldiers there was a great deal of rioting and violence. In Minneapolis the striking teamsters and building tradesmen rejected an order of the regional labor board to end the strike immediately and insisted on fighting to a finish. The employers had accepted the labor board's terms. Governor Olson had brought 3,700 men of the National Guard to the city. In the midst of the disorder on the streets, Congressman Francis H. Shoemaker was arrested for inciting violence and was found guilty, being given the choice of ten days' confinement in the workhouse or a $50 fine.

Toledo's battle centered about the plant of the Electric Auto-Lite company in which 1,800 non-striking employees had been besieged for fifteen hours by a great mob of riotous strikers and frequently fired upon by snipers on the roofs of nearby buildings. The windows of the plant were all broken by stones, and torches thrown through them started many fires. The police used tear gas bombs but were roughly handled by the mobs, so six companies of state troops were called out and they, marching with fixed bayonets, scattered the strikers and released the imprisoned employees.

Later the strikers and their friends gathered again and fought furiously with the troops, showering them with bricks and paving stones. Dozens of soldiers were injured and finally the exasperated guardsmen fired on the mobs, two rioters being killed and many wounded. Tear gas and the more powerful "knockout" gas were freely used by both sides.

Charles P. Taft, son of the late President, was sent from Washington to Toledo as special mediator for the national labor board of the NRA.

SENATOR ROBINSON, majority leader, heard rumors that some senators were planning a filibuster for the purpose of killing the administration's tariff bargaining bill. He said he was ready to squelch any such scheme by prolonging the daily sessions of the senate. "If that is the intention we will meet at 10 a. m. and stay until 8 p. m.," he said. "And, if that doesn't work, we'll come here at 9 a. m. and stay till the same hour in the evening."

Sen. Robinson

The house, after two days of work, passed the administration's industry loan bill and sent it back to the senate. The senate had approved a bill fixing the maximum total RFC five-year loans at $250,000,000 and limiting the amount the twelve federal reserve banks could advance to $280,000,000.

But the house discarded the senate provisions and inserted its own, which increase the RFC total to $300,000,000 and cut the reserve bank maximum to $140,000,000. The differences were to be adjusted in conference.

CLARENCE DARROW'S report on the NRA, submitted some time ago to President Roosevelt, has been made public, and in the main it was just what was expected from the Chicago lawyer and his colleagues. It analyzed eight of the more important codes and found that seven of them foster monopolies, help big business and do a lot toward putting small concerns out of business. These seven codes are: Electrical manufacturing, footwear division, rubber manufacturing, motion pictures, retail solid fuel, steel, ice, and bituminous coal. The report found no monopolistic features in the cleaners and dyers' code.

Administrator Johnson and his chief counsel, Donald R. Richberg, had been given the report previously for the purpose of composing a reply to it. This they did, to the extent of 50,000 vigorous words. They answered all the Darrow charges and asserted the report was "superficial," "intemperate," "inaccurate," "prejudiced," "one sided," "inconsistent," "nonsensical," "insupportable," "false," and "anarchistic."

Darrow came back with a caustic answer that drew further violent language from the NRA chiefs, and the battle then became general. Senator Gerald P. Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, a supporter of Darrow's views, spoke for hours in the senate, demanding that congress stay in session until the existing "abuses" are corrected.

Next came a bitter attack from organized labor, asserting that the Darrow board's report was "a disservice to the nation and its citizens in a time of great economic stress."

A row broke out in the Darrow group that left several members not on speaking terms with one another. William O. Thompson, a member of the board, accused Lowell Mason, the board's counsel, of tampering with the records, and Mason's one-time connection with the Insull interests was brought up.

Darrow and General Johnson, strangely enough, took a social ride to Mount Vernon in the administrator's car, but seemingly all they talked about was history and religion.

PAT HURLEY, former secretary of war, appeared before the senate civil service committee in a warlike mood and angrily demanded that there be a full examination of charges that he was party to a patronage plot hatched by Republicans at his home in Virginia. He declared that it should be determined whether the Department of Justice is out to smear all members of the preceding administration or whether A. V. Dalrymple, the special assistant attorney general who made the charges, is "just an irresponsible falsifier in charge of the wooden pistol section of the Department of Justice."

Patrick J. Hurley

Mr. Dalrymple read to the committee letters from C. W. Broom and Lee Shannon, who told the Justice department assistant that persons whom they declined to name had informed them of the meeting at Hurley's home, where prominent Republicans were alleged to have planned how they could hold on to patronage jobs despite the change in administration. Dalrymple denied that he had made the charges himself.

CHICAGO'S exposition, A Century of Progress, was reopened for another summer with a big military parade and much ceremony. The fair has been reconstructed and redecorated and is a bigger and better exposition this year than the one that called forth so much enthusiastic praise in 1933. The best of the former exhibits and features have been retained, but many new ones have been added and everything has been brought up to date. There are 12 new foreign villages for the edification and amusement of visitors; the Chicago and Detroit symphony orchestras will give long series of fine concerts; the scientific and manufacturers' exhibits have been vastly improved and enlarged; the "Midway," bettered in various ways, has been moved to the lake front of the island; and the entire exposition is resplendent with new colors and new lighting.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT told congress what kind of silver bill he was willing to accept—the compromise explained in this column recently—and such a measure was promptly introduced by Senator Key Pittman. Some members of the silver bloc were far from satisfied with the bill, but there was every indication that it would be passed before the end of the session, the senators from the silver states accepting it in lieu of anything better from their point of view. If they sought to defeat it the probable result would be a long fight and no silver bill whatever. The bill really leaves to the discretion of the President the making of silver a part of the monetary system and the stabilization of its price.

IF REPORTS from Peiping are true, the Japanese have perpetrated another outrage on the helpless Chinese in Manchukuo. The story is that Chinese farmers in the southeastern part of the puppet state refused to give up their arms on demand of the Japanese troops and that as a result army planes bombed twenty farm villages, killing a thousand persons, injuring hundreds of others and destroying all the homes. An explanation from Tokyo, claiming the farmers were really bandits or rebels, may be expected soon.

CONSTITUTIONAL government has been discarded by another European nation. In a bloodless coup d'etat the Bulgarian army took control of that country under a military dictatorship. King Boris either sponsored the movement or quietly yielded to it. He promptly signed about thirty decrees that were prepared in advance, dissolving the parliament and putting the new government in power, with Kimon Gueroguieff as premier. Members of the former government and several other persons were arrested. Not only in Sofia, the capital, but throughout the country the military leaders were in control.

King Boris

The program of the new government was set forth in a long manifesto calling for the creation of a disciplined, orderly state. The principal alterations in the structure of the government include a sharply reduced membership in the legislature, which is to be under firm control of the administration, a reduction in number of the country's political subdivisions, a general weeding out of municipal and provincial authorities, and an intensification of attention upon the interests of villages and rural regions.

Boris, the forty-year-old king, may be relegated to a position of comparative unimportance, as was the king of Italy by Mussolini and his Fascists. But Boris is known as a good fighter and perhaps he can keep himself at the head of his people in fact as well as in name.

WHILE the Paraguayans and the Bolivians were engaged in the biggest and most important battle in the Chaco war, with between 60,000 and 80,000 men on both sides, the League of Nations council at Geneva sent cables to 31 governments asking if they would put an arms embargo on the two nations. This action was taken after the council had adopted a resolution favoring such an embargo at the earliest possible moment, in accord with the message given the congress and the world by President Roosevelt. The State department in Washington was pursuing conversations with Peru, Chile, Brazil and Argentina in the effort to bring an end to the bloody fighting in the Gran Chaco. Bolivian Minister Finot objected strongly to the proposed embargo, asserting it would impose an injustice on Bolivia because Paraguay has an arms and munitions factory and Bolivia has none.

Good news came from Rio de Janeiro, where representatives of Peru and Colombia reached a peaceful settlement of the differences between their nations over the jungle border village of Leticia and thus dissipated a war cloud which has hung over South America for twenty months.

FOR more than thirty years the radical La Folletteites of Wisconsin have been operating as Republicans and under that label have competed, often with success, for control of the state. Now this is to be changed. With the aid of delegates from labor and farm organizations, the followers of Senator La Follette, assembled in convention in Fond du Lac, formed a new party and named it the Progressive party. No statement of principles was made, all attempts to bring one forth being squelched.

Senator La Follette

Senator La Follette kept in the background until questions of organization were settled. With the party name decided, the senator came into the picture with a prepared speech.

The period called Republican prosperity, he said, had culminated in the collapse of the country's economic life. "The disaster of 1929 and the acute distress and suffering of the American people that followed were made possible by the betrayal of the people's trust by men in both parties, controlled through their party organizations by privileged interests."

A few hours later a state central committee was formed, with former Gov. Philip La Follette as its chairman, and in Milwaukee it began mapping out the campaign for the autumn congressional and state elections.

APPROXIMATELY $8,000,000 damage was done by a conflagration in Chicago that was described as the worst that city had experienced since the great fire of 1871. It started in the Union Stock Yards, familiar to all visitors to the city, and within a few hours had swept over an area equivalent to about eight city blocks. The flames also leaped across Halsted street, destroying many shops and residences. Happily only one human life was lost, though the injured, mostly firemen, numbered some 1,100. As the stock pens were comparatively empty over the week-end, the loss of live stock was restricted.

Ants attacked a bee colony near Placerville and resulted in the queerest battle of its kind ever staged in California. When the owner tried to carry his hive out of the vicinity, he too was attacked and had to stop his efforts. The use of calcium cyanide and carbon disulfide was the final means of annihilating the horde.

Sharp jumps in prices of necessities, due to NRA codes, while wages have stood unchanged, have been attacked by Finance Director Rolland Vandegrift. The state, buying for cash and in big lots, is paying 20 per cent more for commodities generally than in May, 1933, and Vandegrift estimated that the average citizen, buying at the corner grocery, must be paying 30 to 40 per cent more for his food and living necessities.

Misunderstanding which originated when Rev. Dillon W. Throckmorten signed a formal protest against Santa Slara anti-picketing ordinances has resulted in his resignation as pastor of the Santa Clara Federated Protestant church. He was accused of radical activities in connection with the strike of cherry pickers a year ago.

Initiative petitions to make the state board of education elective and the state director of education appointive by that body have been placed in circulation in each county of the state. The movement is being sponsored by the California Teachers Association. Under the present system, the director of education is elected and the members of the state board are appointed by the governor.

Collinsville, one time an important shipping port on the Sacramento river and in recent years one of the unique towns in America because of being built on stilts over a swamp, will soon lose claim to that uniqueness.

She is on the bank of the Sacramento river about 15 miles below Rio Vista in Solano county. The federal government has decided to give the residents a new deal by pumping sand from the river into the swamp over which the town is built and put her on a par with other American towns.

In order to co-operate with law enforcement agencies in a campaign against crime, Orange county police departments, constables, the sheriff's office and the California highway patrol have perfected a plan to blockade every highway entering this county against the entry of major criminals. Seven airplanes will also be available for emergency service.

Need for American schools to foster the principles of stern Americanism laid down by the fathers has been cited by Homer L. Chaillaux, state American Legion commander before the Department of California United Spanish War Veterans annual encampment in Pasadena recently. The Legionnaire advocated the elimination of all radical professors from United States educational institutions, private and public.

The state department of public health has defined whisky and gin so that from now on, Californians will be able to buy by the labels and know what they are getting. The definitions were similar to those laid down by the federal government when the new regulations on bottling liquors were made. The alcohol content, age of the spirits, and like information are now to be placed on the bottles, officials of the public health board said.

Although framers of the new San Diego county charter intended to effect a substantial saving by consolidating all constables under direction of the sheriff, cost to taxpayers for salaries alone was jumped by the supervisors from $87,590 this year to $104,880 for the next fiscal year. One of the items of increased cost is creation of a new job, that of head constable at $200 a month. What his duties will be are indefinite.

In terms in which there can be no doubt of the attitude of students of the Redondo Beach high school in upholding the ideals of the American government, student leaders recently repulsed characteristic advances of an asserted Communistic organization designed to foment strife in the school. The student organization informed Communists they did not care to join the Red organization or to have anything to do with it.

As the result of the order of the Los Angeles county charities department recently denying further aid to single men without dependents, more than 5,000 bachelors in Los Angeles were facing the necessity of entering state labor camps or supporting themselves without county help.

California gasoline taxes for April exceeded the April collections of the last three years, according to report made by the state board of equalization. A total of $3,643,836 was the amount collected for April, which was slightly less than the preceding month's total but greatly increased over April, 1932.

Tommy O'Brien, San Francisco, has been named manager of the pari-mutuel betting department of the 1934 state fair. The selection was made by the racing commission of the fair board.

SYNOPSIS

At the close of the Mexican war, Robin Kershaw, with his bride, rode into northeastern California. Here he found an ideal valley for cattle raising. They christened it Eden Valley. Below Eden Valley is a less valuable tract which Kershaw's wife names Forlorn Valley. Joel Hensley settles in the lower half of the valley. There is bad blood over fences and water. Kershaw kills Hensley and the blood-feud is on. By 1917, Rance Kershaw, his son Owen, and daughter Lorry are all that remains of one clan. Nate Tichenor is the sole survivor on the Hensley side. He goes to help Lorry in her car and finds her father has died of heart disease. Silas Babson, banker, schemes to control the irrigation and hydro-electric possibilities of Eden Valley. Nate and Owen, Lorry's brother, met in France just before Owen was killed, and Nate promised that if he survived Owen he would look after Lorry as a brother might do. With money advanced by Nate, Lorry clears up her indebtedness to Babson. Nate finds he is falling in love with Lorry. Babson discovers Nate is behind a rival power project. Nate tells Lorry he loves her. She admits she loves him, and they become engaged. Babson orders Joe Brainerd, editor of the local paper, to attack Nate as an enemy of the people. This Brainerd refuses to do. Nate comes to Brainerd's rescue financially. The editor celebrates by punching Babson's head.

"Now, if this is done the value of our ranches will be very much depreciated, because we will be denied the natural irrigation of a great many thousand acres of rich meadow lands each spring. The constitution of the United States guarantees its citizens against seizure and appropriation of their property without due process of law and adequate compensation. Hence, any state law that contravenes that right is unconstitutional.

"When the federal government issued patents to homesteaders in Eden Valley it did not except the water right from the land right. In presuming to appropriate our riparian rights or any portion of them for the benefit of a distant and non-riparian owner, the state of California is assuming a right it does not legally possess.

"Now, I'm not going to start a bitter lawsuit with the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district. I shall merely enter a formal protest—and when I use the first person singular I mean Miss Kershaw and the Bar H Land and Cattle company. Then I shall sit quietly by and watch those idiots bond their lands, market the bonds, and spend the money to get a diversion dam and dig miles and miles of main canals and laterals. Then, just as they are about to open their floodgates I shall, upon affidavit that the district's action is about to work great hardship and damage upon me, be granted a temporary injunction by the superior court restraining the district from using the water, and ordering it to show cause, within ten days, why such temporary injunction should not be made permanent. The case will then be tried on its merits, and I shall probably lose in the superior court, because the judge will refrain from questioning the constitutionality of the state law. I shall appeal and I shall win, and when I have won, the only legal salvation for Forlorn Valley will be to buy Eden Valley from us, either at private treaty or via the condemnation-suit route. If it wants our water it must buy our lands—and a jury will set the price."

"He hath taken down the mighty from their seat and hath exalted them of low degree," Gagan quoted humorously. "You appear to be something of a financier."

"Just contemplate Forlorn Valley, the money derived from the sale of the bonds all spent on a diversion dam, main canal, floodgates, laterals, engineering fees, salaries, and so forth, suddenly discovering that after all it cannot get the water—that it's all dressed up with no place to go. While they dwell in blissful ignorance of the cataclysm they curse and hate and deride Miss Kershaw and me for protecting our vested rights; when the blow falls—"

"There will be stark drama and tragedy in that, not comedy, Mr. Tichenor."

"I dare say. . . . Well, now that I have had my own ideas on the legality of my position confirmed by such eminent water counsel as yourself, it would seem that all I can do is sit calmly by and watch Forlorn Valley ruin itself."

"But surely, Mr. Tichenor," Gagan protested, "you will take some measures to warn these people before they embark on such a ruinous enterprise."

"Notwithstanding the fact that it would be very bad business for me to do that, I shall do it. It will be a case of love's labor lost, however. The people will not believe me; they are following a false leader and blindly loyal to him. . . . Well, here's your check for legal services to date. Something tells me I shall be retaining your services at a later date."

Returning home, Nate Tichenor was met at the railroad depot in Gold Run by his chauffeur with the car. Passing through Valley Center en route to Eden Valley he saw some men skidding a linotype into a vacant store in the Babson block; above the door a new sign informed the world that presently the Forlorn Valley Citizen would here go to press.

Certainly Babson was losing no time moving into action. Nor was Joe Brainerd, as Nate discovered when he paused at the office of the Register, hoping to glean news of interest that might have occurred during his four days' absence. He found Brainerd writing an editorial cordially welcoming his competitor into the field.

"Going to press tomorrow with a two-page issue, Nate," he announced. "Practically all of my local advertising has been withdrawn."

"Why not run the canceled ads just the same, Joe? If I were you I would decline to let Babson see how badly he has hurt me. He may think his slaves have not obeyed orders and start a fight with them in consequence. If anybody cancels his subscription continue sending him the paper as usual. I'll take care of your deficit. When I'm fighting a bitter fight it's against my religion to cry out or admit I'm hurt."

Brainerd grinned, for this was the sort of fight he loved to wage, if he could afford it. "I'm running another front-page editorial on the water question, Nate. Forlorn Valley has to have the water and if it cannot get it from the Mountain Valley Power company it must tap the creek up in the Handle. I'm living up to our agreement, boy, and making the fight for my subscribers."

"You'd be a traitor not to."

"What did your lawyer say?"

Nate related in detail his conversation with Gagan. "Perhaps," Brainerd suggested, "I'd do well to write a new editorial pointing out to the people the possibility of failure of the plan upon which, led by Babson, they are about to embark. What do the poor devils know about it? Only what Babson tells them."

"That's a splendid idea, Joe. The people will then have an opportunity to read your editorial and digest it before attending the mass meeting. Consequently they will be more favorably inclined toward the proposition I shall have to make them at that meeting. And when the editorial has been written and set up, pull a proof and send it over to Babson. It may give him food for reflection."

Within two hours Brainerd sent his devil over to the bank with the proof and a note from Brainerd to the effect that he was running the editorial in his next issue and inviting comment. After reading the editorial Babson passed it to Henry Rookby for the latter's reaction.

"He asks for my comment, Henry. Well, I'll oblige him." And Babson wrote in red crayon across the proof: "When Forlorn Valley has its own reservoir filled, you and Tichenor have my permission to jump into it and drown yourselves, and greatly oblige, yours, etc., S. Babson."

"Shoot 'em in the foot," Mr. Rookby urged wittily.

When the bank's messenger took the proof and Babson's message back to Joe Brainerd, that astute individual sighed and, after the fashion of newspaper men, who always save the written expressions of opinion of their enemies, locked it up in his safe!

CHAPTER X

Darby, Nate Tichenor's chauffeur, was enjoying to the fullest his master's visit to Eden Valley. Distinctly a New York product, Darby had heard there was considerable space west of the Hudson river, but he had not been prepared to admit that the country was as wide-open as he had found it.

Darby had enjoyed the branding, but most of all he had enjoyed the idleness of his job.

Miss Kershaw had been very kind to Darby, too, in that she had sent him down an old, safe saddle horse to r Also, she had sent a horse down for the gloomy but efficient Joseph, but unfortunately she sent a stock-saddle with him, and as Joseph had never ridden anything but an English saddle, his conservatism forbade that he should try anything new. He compromised, therefore, by taking long walks, after the fashion of his kind, shooting blue-jays and hawks, and fishing. Like Darby, he rejoiced because his master required but little service from him.

Before leaving for San Francisco, however, the master had given the task of posting "No Shooting, Fishing or Trespassing" notices from the gate at the entrance to Eden Valley to the farthest limit of the Kershaw ranch. This task pleased both servants, particularly Joseph, who possessed a truly Britannic passion for privacy and the protection of private shooting and fishing preserves from alien invasion. The notices once up, therefore, Joseph saw his duty plainly before him. With much misgiving, therefore, he climbed into the stock-saddle on the horse Lorry Kershaw had sent him, slung a .22 calibre rifle in a scabbard and set forth to apprehend poachers, a poacher being considered by Joseph as absolutely the lowest form of human life.

For two days he ambled through the pleasant valley, enjoying the solitude.

The day Tichenor came home from San Francisco Darby seized upon his absence to go fishing, while Joseph saddled his horse and set forth again on his delightful journeying, his heart still beating high with the hope of finding a poacher. And late in the afternoon, as the shadows were growing long in Eden Valley and Joseph was reminded that he must return home soon and prepare dinner for his master, who had informed him he would dine at home that night, he discovered a poacher.

He had ridden into a thick grove of yellow pines when, happening to glance up the side of the ridge that separated Eden Valley from Forlorn Valley, he saw a man descending through the buckbrush and laurel. Through his master's binoculars the excellent Joseph made appraisal and discovered the man carried a rifle.

The man could really have found more open going, yet he preferred to stick to the tall brush, nor did he advance confidently as an honest man should. Arriving at last at the foot of the ridge, the fellow found himself a hiding place in a clump of laurel about 30 feet above the road, and Joseph both saw and heard him break off some branches as if to clear his view of the road. Then he sat down.

"Something devilish queer about this fellow, what?" Joseph decided. He got off his horse cautiously and slipped from tree to tree until he was within 40 yards of the man, when he sat down behind a clump of manzanita to await developments. Through his binoculars he could now make out the man's form; he saw that the fellow's rifle rested in a crotch in a laurel bush.

"He's waiting for somebody," Joseph concluded. "By Jove, a bally assassin, what? The blighter will bear close watching for a bit, I fancy."

Suddenly, up the valley, Joseph caught a faint rumbling. He knew that would be his master's automobile crossing a loosely planked little bridge across one of the small lateral streams that flowed down the hillside to Eden Valley creek. Instantly there was a slight movement in the laurel bush; a little later Nate Tichenor's car hove into view. Joseph saw the hiding man's hand come up and grasp the rifle, saw his head come down to cuddle the stock—so Joseph, horribly excited but with his duty clear before him, sighted on the man's head and pulled away. He was rewarded by hearing a grunt; then the bushes parted, the man leaped down into the road and scuttled across it for the haven of the clump of sugar pines in which Joseph was hidden. As he passed the bush behind which Joseph knelt concealed, the valet leaped up, followed and banged the fellow heartily over the head with his rifle barrel. Then he helped himself to the stranger's rifle and stepped out into the road.

"It's quite all right, Mr. Tichenor," he shouted. "Joseph speaking, sir. The blighter was out to scupper you, I fancy, but I've scuppered him. Do come and have a look at the rascal, sir."

Nate drove up, alighted and followed Joseph into the pine grove, where he rolled the unconscious man over and looked at him. "That's Pitt River Charley," he announced. "He's a half-breed Indian and years ago he used to be a professional killer. I thought the fool had retired, but somebody must have made it worth his while to get back into harness. Are you quite certain he was gunning for me, Joseph?"

"Absolutely, sir. I've been watching him for an hour, sir. His gun was at his shoulder and he was sighting on you, sir, when I fired at his head, sir."

"You're a rotten shot, at that range, Joseph. You've put a .22 calibre bullet through his biceps. However, it sufficed to spoil his plan and stampeded him, so he ran for these trees."

He helped himself to the canteen on Joseph's saddle and dashed some water over Pitt River Charley's dusky face. Then he emptied the fellow's pockets and found two hundred and fifty dollars in crisp new bills. Tichenor grinned at his servant. "It seems I'm worth five hundred dollars dead to somebody, Joseph. It's the custom to pay half down and the remainder upon completion of the job, and whoever hired this fellow is a fool, because Pitt River Charley would have worked for a lot less money."

"Good G—d, sir," cried the horrified Joseph.

"Well, you haven't got a killing on your honest British soul, Joseph, and I'm obliged to you for saving my life." Joseph was horribly embarrassed when Tichenor slapped his back several times and assured him he was a brick and a stout fellow and that he, Tichenor, craved a glimpse of the man who could thereafter pry Joseph loose from his service. "I'll guard this fellow," he continued, "while you take the car, drive up to the Kershaw ranch and without letting Miss Kershaw know anything about this affair, find Rube Tenney, her superintendent, and tell him I want to see him immediately. He's to come back in the car with you and bring his riata."

"Sorter like the old days ag'in, ain't it, son?" Mr. Tenney declared, as he gazed upon Pitt River Charley, now recovered consciousness and sitting with his back against the bole of a tree, his dark, evil face absolutely expressionless. He turned to the valet. "You drive down the road a bit, hombre, and wait there fifteen minutes. Then come back with the car. Me an' Mr. Tichenor's goin' to hold court here an' it's to be a private session."

He removed the steel ramrod from the butt of Joseph's little rifle, screwed it together and wrapped his bandana handkerchief around one end, in order to get a good grip on it.

He grasped a handful of shirt in the middle of Pitt River Charley's back and with one savage jerk the man's torso was naked.

"Run along, Joseph," Tichenor ordered gently, "or you'll be sick to your stomach." He was already binding Pitt River Charley's hands in the loop of Rube Tenney's riata, and Mr. Tenney was gazing earnestly upward for a limb to pass the rope over.

So Joseph, sickened, departed in the car and before he had gone two hundred yards he heard a succession of screams echoing through the valley. "They're cutting 'is bally back to ribbons with that steel ramrod," the valet decided.

Nate Tichenor questioned Pitt River Charley and when the halfbreed refused to talk and took refuge in aboriginal sullenness, Rube Tenney used the ramrod, while his victim hung helpless from a limb, his toes just touching the earth. His judges know his kind—knew that only quick work and dirty work would bring the information so vitally needed.

Science Hopes to Determine Freshness of Meat by the Use of Electric Current

At Gloucester, Mass., where the artists go every summer, the United States bureau of fisheries maintains a station where Drs. Maurice E. Stansby and James M. Lemon are substituting science for the hand, the eye and the nose in judging the freshness of fish. You see them grinding up a haddock, shaking it up with some water, then adding a little quinhydrone and finally passing a feeble electric current through the mass. A voltmeter, familiar to radio enthusiasts as a potentiometer, tells how many volts are passing through and hence indicates how fresh the fish is, says Waldeman Kaempffert in the New York Times. The test means simply that more electricity can be passed through a fresh than through a stale fish.

Clearly this is no test to housewives. But dealers who buy and sell fish by the carload and shipload can make money by use of it. "It is not necessary to tell how long it has been since a fish was caught," say Stansby and Lemon, "but it is important to know how much longer a fish may be expected to keep in an edible condition if handled properly."

After a fish is landed it stiffens which explains why firm flesh has always been the housewife's tried and true test of freshness. Soon a softening process sets in. First the complex proteins break down. Later the bacteria set to work and bring about further decomposition. Mere softening detracts from the value of a fish but not from its edibility. Bacteria spoil the fish.

Since fish is packed in ice for as long as two weeks, during which softening may occur, the test is of commercial importance. The scientists believe that their method may be equally applicable to meat and other packing house products.

MAKE CLAIMS OF NEW DEATH RAY

British Scientists Find Deadly "War Weapon."

Announcement has been made that a new death ray has been discovered by British scientists. Here is something, provided the scientists have made no mistake, which should bring peace with a vengeance. Meanwhile we must be content with the novelty of the thought. Not that the thought is original, but at last we have some reason to believe that it soon may be translated into practical form.

The alleged ray is devilish enough to satisfy the most exacting and refined homicidal complex. It can, if reports are true, be employed to transmit the germinating qualities of bacteria over great distance, or, to put it more succinctly, to broadcast disease.

Just picture to yourself the prestige of an operator who could send some deadly affliction from England to France, or even to America, while sitting safely in a little cage at London.

His prestige wouldn't last very long, of course, because the whole world would set out to find a preventive. There must be a preventive, you realize, otherwise this death ray would have exterminated all of us long ago.

Finally, and most consoling, the reported discovery may be just some more bunk. Every so often we hear about the advent of a new death ray. No less than a dozen have been advertised since the World war, but somehow they have failed to materialize.

The strangest part of it all is that men should continue to hunt for a death ray, just as if the race were not already in possession of a sufficient number of variety of murderous devices.

Obviously, the killer complex still flourishes. Though somewhat squeamish about messy, old-fashion methods of slaughtering each other we are not prepared to give up the basic idea. What we really crave is refinement on the one hand and a reduction of risk on the other. Repugnance to the ancient style of hand to hand combat has played some part in perfecting war engines.

You don't get the intimate reactions from dropping a gas bomb or poisoning a water system that you do from seeing a foe die at your feet, nor does the prospect of getting killed by a bit of stray vapor or an unwary drink seem half so disagreeable as that of expiring under the bloodshot eyes of an enraged enemy.

A flood in China does not seem half as horrible as one close at home—which should reveal the comfort of broadcasting death. It would take the sting out of strife if we could sit safely down on this side of the Atlantic while sending death by air to people on the other side. No doubt they would return us the compliment, but even so the crude, personal element would be lacking.

One wonders if there ever will come a time when men will realize that certain discoveries are not worth making, or that intelligence can serve a better purpose than perfecting instruments of murder.—M. E. Tracy, in the New York World-Telegram.

SLICE ON COURSE GOLFING HAZARD; NO 'ACT OF GOD'

Hit in the eye by a golf ball as she was motoring, a New York woman took the eye to Judge Pettie's court the other day and sought damages in the amount of $1,000.

To this the golfer's counsel objected strongly, arguing that a gust of wind had carried the ball off its course, and that consequently, the accident was an "act of God."

The judge gave the case to the lady, who gets $750, and said in the course of a 19-page decision:

"It must be conceded that, although golf should not be deemed a hazardous game, a driven golf ball is a very dangerous missile and that its flight and direction cannot always be controlled by the player. The uncertainty is a part of the game. The ball, when struck, is liable to go down the fairway or fly off to the right or left or at any angle.

"The element of danger, therefore, though not intrinsic in the game itself, is nevertheless present, according to a given set of circumstances.

"The situation is not changed by the fact that the act of propelling the ball is in itself not wrongful and is for a lawful purpose, that is, to play the game.

"It is not likely that the conclusions I have reached work undue hardship upon any golf club, since the risk may be readily insured against for a premium which in the nature of things will be quite small."—Literary Digest.

City Fathers of Paris Turn Franklin Statue

When the new avenue "Paul Doumer" was opened, writes the Paris correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph, the city fathers of Paris, who watch over all the city's statues with a paternal eye, decided that Benjamin Franklin was ill at ease. Benjamin Franklin sits in a comfortable armchair upon a fine pedestal at the corner of the new avenue and the Rue Franklin.

He would smile almost imperceptibly at the domes and towers of the Trocadero, a few yards away; but obviously he was disturbed by the new thoroughfare, especially as he could not see properly what was happening therein. So the city fathers' edict went forth:

"Thirty degrees" was the order given by the town-planning authorities. Workmen, having turned Benjamin Franklin round 30 degrees, then fixed his pedestal firmly in new asphalt.

STIMULATING VISION IN YOUTH

Too often in the humdrum of the daily routine, the far view and the long view, the look into the future, is neglected Not even a glance is directed toward what the years may unfold. The moment, and the endless series of moments, is filled with the immediate requirements of earning the daily bread. To youth, however, the world is new. Life's emergencies, as a rule, have not begun to shut away its possibilities or probabilities.

Today in poolitical, social and economic conditions, there are apparent certain trends that logically should lead to a new order in American life.

To stimulate the youth of California to examine these trends and from the clues to be gathered in such developments, for instance, as the codifying of rules to govern each industry, trade and profession, the Bank of America is offering $10,000 in cash awards and scholarships to those boys and girls who can best picture life, as they think it will be in 1964.

It is an opportunity such as is seldom offered the boys and girls of this community to study the signs of the times, to track down these many changeful and meaningful portraits constructing from fragments and scattered evidence of the complete picture of American government, industry, social status, or all them together, or along any one line, such as astronomy. There will be 414 essays to receive awards. It is a test of the metal of bright boys and girls.

SPEED IS THE DANGER

The world's record for throwing the 16-pound shot, one of the regular events at all track and field meets, is 53 feet.

The amount of energy possessed by an average-sized automobile traveling at 60 miles an hour would be sufficient to throw that shot 52,800 feet—nearly ten miles.

To use another illustration, a car traveling at 60 miles has the same capacity for inflicting damage as it were driven off a 12 story building.

Those facts, brought out in a recent report of the Traveler's Insurance Company, give some idea of the potential menace of speed on the highway. During recent years the death and injury rate per accident has been rising—and the increase was especially marked in 1933. The chance of a person being seriously hurt or killed in an accident is substantially greater than it would have been five or ten years ago in a simlar accident. The reason can be expressed in one word: Speed.

Today's cars have better brakes, better steering, better lights and stronger bodies than those of the past. By all engineering standards, they are safer. What has happened is that the public has exaggerated the increased safety factors—and actually turned these improvements into dangers.

Watch your speed—adapt it to local conditions at all times—and you'll have taken a long step toward becoming a safe driver.

ERROR IN NAME

Through a misunderstanding in a phone message, Charles Giani was given as the name of the Italian boy who died in France during the World War, instead of Orlindi Giunchi.

Mr. Giani, one of the first of Nevada City boys to enlist and who saw much service in the war, was a color bearer in the recent Memorial Day parade.

SAFETY FIRST

The lighted match you throw away
May start a fire no hand can stay.

Mary had a camp fire bright,
But failed to put it out;
And soon a western wind came by
And scattered it about;
So in that spot no flowers or birds
Salute the summer breeze,
But death and desolation reign
Where once were living trees.

Tommy struck a Lucifer
To light a cigarette;
And threw it down still burning, sir,
Which later brought regret;
For presently a fire sprang up
To rage the life long day,
And leave a cruel, ugly scar
Beside the King's Highway.

Jerry had a pile of trash
Within his basement dim,
That he was breeding trouble there
Did not occur to him;
But when a fire broke out one night
And menaced half the town,
The firemen read the riot act,
To careless Jerry Brown.

There are so many stupid ways
In which to start a fire,
To shun each as we would the plague,
Should be our fixed desire;
Remembering, in each heedless act
Potential dangers lie,
Be this our slogan, "Safety First,"
As summer days go by.

A. MERRIAM CONNER.

NEW GEOLOGICAL REPORT ISSUED

The January, 1934, issue of the California Journal of Mines and Geology, which has just been released from the office of the State Mineralogist, Wallter W. Bradley, contains several interesting geological articles related to mining. This Quarterly Chapter of the State Mineralogist's Report XXX, is on sale for 40 cents, plus 5 cents for postage, and may be purchased through the office of the California State Division of Mines, Ferry Building, San Francisco, California; or through the district offices in Los Angeles, Sacramento and Redding.

The geology and mineral resources of the rugged mountainous area of northeastern Madera county is reported upon by Homer D. Erwin, who describes a large iron deposit, a district of lead and zinc, and some deposits of molybdenum, tungsten, and copper. The rock formations and their history are described in detail, together with their relation to the ore deposits. Geological, as well as mine maps, form an important part of the report, which is profusely illustrated with photographs of the salient features of the area.

Just east of the Madera county area, in southwestern Mono county, is another mining district which is described by Evans B. Mayo in a report, "Geology and Mineral Deposits of Laurel and Convict Basins." This is a brief, concise paper, but well-illustrated with maps and photographs. Deposits of Iceland spar, tungsten, silver, gold, molybdenum, copper lead and zinc, and their locations are described, together with their relationship to the geological conditions of the area.

A brief preliminary paper by Olaf P. Jenkins, Chief Geologist of the Division of Mines, describes a fundamental geological process which is involved in placer gold deposition. It is shown that the older, richest, gold bearing Tertiary river channels of the Sierra Nevada, exemplified in the region of Table Mountain, Tuolumne county, flowed under climatic conditions which absolutely differ from those of today. The streams ran in direction which have little to do with the directions of many of the later lava flows or later streams. Gradual erosion in the Sierra has, in places, removed the volcanic cover in such a manner that the earlier bedrock surfaces, over which these auriferous streams once flowed, have been resurrected. This process has revealed the actual positions of some of the oldest channels which in a number of places are still covered by several layers of volcanic ash, boulders, and lava.

It is shown that exploration by means of a careful study of air-photographs of the region, coupled with a detailed geological investigation and finally by geophysical surveying, prior to test-drilling, should bring about more direct results in finding the still undiscovered gold deposits, which lie in these ancient buried channels. William Q. Wright, Jr., has contributed a few paragraphs, describing the value of geophysical methods as applied to the prospecting of gold in buried channels.

In addition to these geological papers, is a report by Homer D. Erwin, describing some methods of sampli as applied to gold quartz deposits.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Culford, of Livermore, who were on their way to Oregon, stopped over in Nevada City Saturday for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Bosworth, former friends, and left early Sunday forenoon for the north.

YOUR CHILD AND THE SCHOOL

By Dr. ALLEN G. IRELAND
Director, Physical and Health Education New Jersey State Department of Public Instruction

May Day

With all its rich traditions, May Day was the ideal choice for Child Health Day. Somehow we naturally connect the First of May with children. More than that, in our imagination we picture them as happy children—romping, rollicking, laughing—enjoying and thriving in spring sunshine and fresh air.

To write of health and May Day together seems most appropriate. If you are a parent, I say take a little time to be both thoughtful and reverent. Think of what you can do to further the cause of child health, and be reverent before the blessedness of childhood. If you belong to some organization, talk up May Day. Get the membership into planning something for the children. Call on the school officials to inquire how you can help them.

Does the school have adequate luncheon e[illegible]t? Perhaps you can earn so[illegible]oney with which to provide it. What does the school nurse need? The possibilities are without end. The principal thing is to do something worthy on this day set apart for our children. Congress has adopted a Resolution, the President of the United States will issue a Proclamation pronouncing May 1 Child Health Day. Let us each do at least one thing for a child.

Important ideas on child health will be set forth in Dr. Ireland's next article.

KEEP IN MEMORY ONLY THE HAPPY THINGS OF LIFE

There are many men who say they are philosophers when, indeed, they are no such thing. Anyway, they are not true philosophers because they voice mere platitudes and do not search deeply enough into the human heart.

But, happily, there is, now and then, a man who can be called a true philosopher and is really that, and one of them spent an hour with us under the stars, lately, in our little high house in the hills, writes John Steven McGroarty, in the Los Angeles Sunday Times Magazine.

He laid before us many solutions for the problems, the vexations, the disappointments and even the sorrows of life. We recall all that he said, but that which impressed us most was the doctrine of remembering only happy things. Regrets and sins should be forgotten. What use to keep them in mind? They are things that have passed. So, let the dead past bury its dead.

If there has been in life one morning of happy laughter, remember it. Keep it deep in your heart. Let the road you have traveled be a road of glad memories—a night when the moon was on the sea, a wayside roof that sheltered you, and you were content with having what your heart desired. A misty morning, a little river, voices of great trees when you were happy. Keep them deep in your heart with their memories.

It is our thoughts that make life. So, that life may be lived best, remember only happy hours.

All this, and more, was said to us under the stars, when night was upon the hills.

Effects of War Gases

Most physicians believed at the close of the World war that the results of the gas attacks during the war would surely be the development of tuberculosis and bronchial troubles among the victims. Fifteen years have passed without the feared after effects.

A careful check by the War department and the Veterans bureau has revealed that very few of the tubercular and bronchial cases can be laid at the door of gas attacks. In most of these cases it is believed that the germs were already present and not caused by the gas. Medical officers believe that enough time has passed to show up any after effects caused by the gas experience.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Farm & Ranch
California Agriculture

(By WNU Service)

At a special meeting in Ventura county, growers decided to pay 25 cents an hour for apricot pitters and raise day laborers' wages 33⅓ per cent.

California farmers have been notified by the federal farm credit administration that emergency crop loans will be continued this year for summer fallowing and purchase of seed wheat.

Over 8,000 persons attended the Sonoma County Rabbit Breeders' Association first annual rose carnival show in Santa Rosa recently. There were 180 entries from all parts of the state and from neighboring states. Judges were Jack Villar of San Jose and Clyde Howard of Palo Alto.

With early season prices virtually double what they were a year ago, apricot growers of the San Joaquin valley are in line to make substantial profits from their crop. Production this year is expected to be the smallest in many years. Shippers and canners are paying $40 a ton for good quality fruit at the roadside, as compared with $15 to $20 a ton last year. Packers are purchasing futures at 12½ cents a pound for the dried fruit, about six cents a pound more than paid last year.

The total crop of Gravenstein apples this season is estimated at not over 50 per cent of last year's production, according to a report of a recent crop survey made by the California Fruit Exchange. The Georgia peach crop, which is the strongest competitor for the Gravenstein apple shipments, is estimated in the neighborhood of 10,000 cars this year, starting to markets around June 1.

Tabulation of the results of the annual Far Western Ram Sale and Wool Show, conducted in Sacramento, revealed that the greatest number of rams in history of the event were sold, the money volume was the largest since 1929 and the average price per ram was the highest since 1930.

Sales for the two days totaled $49,923, in addition to which the buyers must pay the state 2½ per cent sales tax, thus bring the amount handled to almost $52,000. Rams auctioned brought $49,586 for 1,456, and 17 ewes brought $337. The average price was $34 per head, 55 per cent higher than the figure of $22.85 of last year, when 976 rams were sold.

Weather conditions this year have favored the development of many kinds of fungus diseases on plants and as a result diseases thus far have been widespread and highly destructive to several California fruit crops, particularly apricots and cherries, Dr. G. Milbrath, chief of the bureau of plant pathology, state department of agriculture, reports.

In view of the presence of heavy brown rot infestations on apricots discovered at this time, Milbrath urged vineyardists to take steps to launch vigorous campaigns against mildew on grapes, because, he said, in the past when brown rot has been extensive on apricots that powdery mildew on grapes has usually followed.

Notes from the field:

Mendicino county — Recent rainfall detrimental, as it will necessitate cultivation of orchards and vineyards, and cut hay and dry range grass were damaged.

Sonoma county—Damp weather increasing hop mildew. Cherries somewhat damaged by rain.

Marin county—Cut hay damaged but grass, along coast benefited.

Sutter county—Sugar beet condition excellent; grain and alfalfa hay harvests progressing.

Yuba county — Pear blight feared as result of recent rain.

Yolo county — Apricots and plums moving rapidly. Sugar beets in good condition.

San Joaquin county—Grain harvest begun; yield low; kernels well filled but heads small. Vine hopper nympth control progressing satisfactorily.

Placer county — Recent warmth caused considerable drop of Bartlett pears, but remaining crop sizing well.

El Dorado county—Haying progressing; fruit sizing well.

Kings county—Nominal damage to hay and grain and resulphuring of grape vines result of recent rain.

Kern county—Cotton making excellent progress; potato harvest near peak.

Orange county — Valencia picking progressing well; new crop set heavy; avocados setting heavily.

Los Angeles county—Picking Valencias proceeding; drop of new navel oranges rather heavy; condition of walnut orchards greatly improved.

San Diego county—Light picking of Valencias being made.

Imperial county — Grapefruit set light; flax threshing progressed; melons, cantaloupes and tomatoes plentiful with shipments heavy.

Continued operation of the United Prune Growers of California in handling of the 1934 California prune crop has been assured by 80 per cent control of the crop, which, according to 1931 figures, will total 162,771 tons.

A freak 15-minute hail storm, in which stones 1⅜ inches in diameter clattered down, struck portions of San Benito county, smashing auto windows, going through some roofs and damaging the apricot crop more than $500,000, an official of the farm bureau at Hollister estimated.

That Body of Yours

Weak Stomach

PERHAPS you have a weak stomach and have tried various medicines without getting satisfactory results.

It is only natural when you have an "ache" in the stomach, heartburn, a tendency to vomit after eating, and attacks of diarrhoea that you should take "stomach" medicines.

As a matter of fact, what is called weak stomach may be due to a number of causes that have nothing to do with the stomach proper.

For instance any poisoning in the system from bad teeth or tonsils, infected gall bladder or a sluggish intestine can so upset the stomach that it will not do its work properly.

As you know, the majority of people who have real stomach trouble such as ulcer, have brought on that condition because of their mental make up—nervous irritable, excitable.

Another cause of weak stomach is an incorrect diet; that is a diet not suited in quantity or quality to the ability of the digestive tract.

Dr. F. Kraupl, Berlin, says that the whole series of symptoms of weak stomach, up to the actual formation of ulcer, could often be avoided—if the diet were always right for the stomach.

The thought then is that in all cases of weak stomach, the individual should get a complete examination by dentist and doctor and everything that may be interfering with the work of the stomach removed or corrected.

This may mean rest periods before eating, smaller meals, foods that the patient likes and that agree with him, no emotional disturbances before, at, or immediately after meals, correction of constipation, and establishment of a regular bowel movement.

It has bee often noted that where test meals and X-ray examinations have been made, no deformity, delay in emptying, or other ailment was found, yet the individual suffered with a "weak stomach." By simple changing his habits, studying his diet, giving him a little change or vacation, the stomach became strong and free from any disturbances.

In other words the stomach very often is weak or feels weak because of conditions in the body or the mind instead of in the stomach itself.

Migraine or One-Sided Headache

DESPITE all the efforts of practitioners and research men, the cause of migraine or one-sided headache has not been discovered.

You may remember that an institution, in an endeavor to investigate this ailment, advertised for sufferers to submit to treatment and were forced to turn away many hundreds, such is the number afflicted.

Drs. M. Critchley and F. R. Ferguson, London, state that migraine may be due to the liver, the eye, the food, and other causes. They believe that there are two factors entering into the cause—something already existing in the body, and something which affects this body condition.

As you know this is also the thought in epilepsy, the cause of which has not yet been discovered. In epilepsy there is a body condition, and some outside influence such as food is the match that sets off the already prepared fire.

If then migraine may be traced to the liver, to the eye, or other part of the body, or to the food eaten, then the natural method of treatment would be to try to determine which one of these may be giving the trouble in each particular case.

Thus, to investigate a case of migraine, a regular routine should be followed, which would include:

1. A careful previous history of the patient, and also his family history.
2. A physical and mental examination.
3. Careful testing for anything abnormal about the eyes.
4. An X-ray examination of lower floor of the skull, the sinuses, the gall bladder, and the intestinal tract.
5. Full examination of the fluid in the brain and spinal column, and the pressure of this fluid.
6. Examination of the blood sugar, the urine, and the alkali reserve of the blood and tissues.
7. Finding the rate at which the body processes work, or the basal metabolism as it is called.

Doctors Critchley and Ferguson state it is useless to fight off an attack and recommend retirement to a quiet darkened room as soon as possible and the use of a quieting drug.

Between attacks some patients are helped by epsom salts, special diets, and sometimes by mental treatment or suggestion.

Sufferers with migraine might well think about the above complete examination and the possibility of locating the cause of their suffering.

A Natural Compass

A beetle called the telephore is described by a bugologist, of Paris, in relating experiments with insects at the Paris museum. This little beetle, when suspended in the air, always succeeds in turning its body until it points directly north and south. No matter how much it may be turned it always adjusts itself in this manner by means of its antenna.—Pathfinder Magazine

Scraps of Humor

SMOOTH STRATEGY

"In the course of time you must have made many enemies."

"I have made but few enemies," answered Senator Sorghum. "Occasionally, of course, I have provoked active expressions of antagonism which I was sure I could argue down. But I never deliberately make an enemy except when I feel that I need him in my business."

Excited

A primary class had been studying about exclamation marks and the teacher explained that these were used to show unusual feeling or excitement. The next day when little Beverly was reading, she stopped suddenly and exclaimed:

"Oh, Mrs. ——, here's an excited mark, right in our reader!"

Not Quite the Same

Henpecked Husband (who has just overheard his wife scolding the maid)—You and I both seem to be in the same unfortunate position, Mary.

Maid—Not likely. I'm giving her a week's notice tomorrow.—London Weekly.

Retort Courteous

She had just refused his invitation to ride in his car.

"I have driven that car for seven years, and never had a wreck," he defended warmly.

"You mean," said she, "that you have driven that wreck for seven years, and never had a car."

Brought a Lot of Grief

"What invention do you figure is one we best could do without?"

"The fountain pen—without it my name never would have gotten on a lot of dotted lines."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Broken to Harness

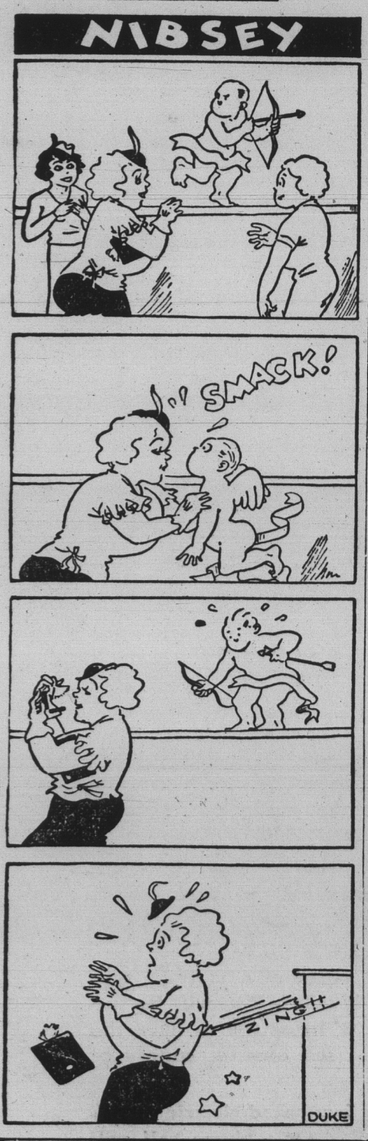
"Just why do you want a married man to work for you, rather than a bachelor?" asked the curious chap.

"Well," sighed the boss, "the married men don't get so upset if I yell at them."—Brooklyn Citizen.

Hope Springs Eternal

Miss Slimmons—Why, you weighed yourself only an hour ago.

Miss Ada Pose—I know, but I've been fasting ever since and I thought I might have gone off some.



FROCK FOR LITTLE ONE WILL PLEASE HER, AND MOTHER

PATTERN 9695

A small girl will look very sweet in this little dress. The yoke is scalloped in front and plain in back. There are little bows which tie the sleeves very smartly, and a cunning collar. Her mother can make the dress, omitting the lower part of the sleeves and the collar, as the small sketch shows. Use the pattern to make several different dresses; for example, it's cute made of a cotton print, and equally dainty in one of the pastel shades in plain silk or linen, or dimity.

Pattern 9695 may be ordered only in sizes 2, 4, 6, 8, and 10. Size 4 requires 2⅛ yards 36-inch fabric and ⅜ yard contrasting.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 W. Eighteenth St., New York, N. Y.

BIRTH OF ROMANCE

He was spouting with great vigor against corporal punishment for boys, which he declared never did any good. "Take my own case," he exclaimed. "I was never caned but once in my life, and that was for speaking the truth."

"Well," retorted somebody in the audience, "it cured you."—Vart Hem.

General Opinion

Percy Pinfeather—You may not think so, but some of the fellows think I've got a rattling good head on me.

Dolly Dill—I dare say you have. I've always considered you more or less rattle-brained.

Quite Warm Anyway

Joe—Did your wife have you on the carpet for getting home late last night?

Jim—Well, it may have been the carpet she had me on, but it seemed to me more like a red-hot stove.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Often Mentioned

A wife, waiting at her husband's office, began a conversation with the office boy.

"Does he ever talk about the cat, his favorite house pet, down here at the office?" the wife asked.

"Yes—he—does. He calls it battle-axe," the boy replied.

Should Wear Them

Mrs. Youngwife—Would you stoop to go through your husband's pockets at night?

Mrs. Oldwife—I have to stoop to do it; when he comes in at night he throws his clothes on the floor.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Practice

"How gracefully he seems to eat corn on the cob."

"He ought to. He's a piccolo player."

The 1934 graduating class, of the Nevada City Union high school, attended Trinity Episcopal church last evening to hear the Baccalaureate sermon preached by Rev. Charles Wasnburn. Rev. Buckner offered the prayer. Very beautiful music was rendered by the combined Methodist and Episcopal choirs.

SHORT STORIES ON LAKE TAHOE

High altitude sunshine during the early summer months is claimed to be the most adaptable for health giving rays, according to an eminent skin specialist who visited Lake Tahoe last year and the year before. He states that the sun rays traveling in air-thinned altitude before they become severe, due to extreme summer heat, are most beneficial for invigorating the skin, and there penetrating quality are of tremendous advantage in curing other ailments of a deeper nature. Come to Lake Tahoe this year and enjoy this sunshine tonic, it will fit you to better handle the daily problems confronting you.

Famous auhorities on snakes state that they will not survive in Lake Tahoe and to prove this, sometime ago an expedition composed of these authorities and local Lake Tahoe people brought several rattlesnakes into Lake Valley and endeavored to acclimate them, or have them stay within the Valley boundaries. Believe it or not, many of the snakes started crawling away immediately heading directly for the ranges bordering the Lake, and others not so inclined remained in apparent contentment, but are reported to have died within 48 hours. This is in itself an invitation to spend your summer vacation at Lake Tahoe this year, where this habitation for man does not harbor rattlesnakes or insects.

The Lake Tahoe steamer plying the enormous expanse of blue-green water, carrying thrilled boating enthusiasts on excursions of beauty and intereht, is an eventful experience never to be forgotten. The modern method of water transportation does not steal any of the ancient glamour of natural ever-changing shoreline become dull or monotonous. Take a steamer excursion around Lake Tahoe when vacationing there this summer. It is safe, cool, comfortable and inexpensive.

For the information of newcomers and old-timers who have not been to the Lake recently, it is timely to call to their attention the extensive improvements made in road conditions approaching and circling Lake Tahoe. Millions of dollars have been spent in recent years in perfecting grades, widths, and short-cuts in the entire road system of the High Sierra Region. The many engineering feats accomplished, the almost insurmountable obstacles overcome, all stand as a monument to those who built to last this modern highway, and it is daily acclaimed by the thousands of motorists who travel these arterials, answering the lure of the "Playground" empire of the High Sierras, Lake Tahoe, California.

SOCIAL EVENTS

Senior Ball is Largely Attended

The high school's graduating class ('34) bade farewell to high school social activities with a very suecessful Senior Ball Friday night at the Armory Hall.

Allen's orchestra from Marysville provided their usual excellent jazz.

The hall was cleverly decorated carrying out a forty-niner motif. The walls were panelled by black and white horse-drawn covered wagons, and the stage was canopied with the old Canoga schoooner covering with wheels in front and below the stage so that it almost seemed that the musicians were playing from a covered wagon.

Bright vari-colored balloons at first hung high from the balcony but as with the stars at the Junior Prom, they didn't last long, and many of the girls were soon wearing them.

The ball was most successful financially as well as socially. It was as well attended as the Junior Prom. At 9:30 a Grand March was gracefully executed, led by Bob Tamblyn and Erma Keller.

The patrons and patronesses were:
Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Arbogast.
Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Cassidy.
Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Sweeney.

Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Keller.
